"PROVIDING OPPORTUNITIES AND INVESTING IN CHRISTIAN ATHLETES"

INTRODUCTION

Welcome to the John Melvin University Millers Foundation (JMUMF). The JMUMF is a non-profit organization that serves as the official fundraising organization for the John Melvin University Students and Athletes. Every dollar raised supports the advancement of our academics, our faith, and our Christian Students.

This is more than just an excellent advertising opportunity. It's an opportunity to help us change the world one campus at a time through a high-quality Christian Education.

Your corporate sponsorship will help us achieve our goal of advancing students academically, athletically, and spiritually. With your generous support, we fund scholarships for future leaders. We can invest in the very people who make us great - our faculty and our staff. We can create professorships and recruit outstanding faculty and staff who will enlighten, challenge, and prepare our students to lead successful and impactful lives.

By joining this sponsorship campaign, you join me and the entire JM University community in building a future that is greatly needed for positive change in higher education.

BUILDING THE COMMUNITY TOGETHER

- John Melvin University is passionate about Community Involvement
- Every community wants to become a great place to live and work.
- JMU wants to create a place our children and grandchildren will want to be.
- JMU wants to attract investments to our community, provide good jobs, and create lively areas throughout the city where citizens will want to work, live, shop, and play.
- JMU realizes that a strong education system creates a strong talent base and appeals to investors and business professionals.
- JMU is committed to volunteering time with local youth sports programs, schools, hospitals, and businesses to help others grow and succeed.

Every year, hundreds of thousands of people in the Southeast gather to scream, cheer, clap, boo, cry, curse, and chant mantras.

Half of those people go to bed smiling because their team won. The other half are less pleased. One thing they all do, though, is spend money attending college athletic events. College sports fans spend millions at local hotels, restaurants, gas stations, and other businesses yearly. Millions more across the country watch on television and live streams providing advertising opportunities and funding from major networks (ESPN, Fox Sports, etc.)

College sports are big business, perhaps nowhere more than in the Southeast. Yet the universities have a far larger economic imprint on their communities and states than their athletic teams. While sports are highly visible, and fans create an economic boost for college towns, the actual operations of universities appear more economically significant than ball games. JMU provides many job opportunities to residents and attracts new employees and their families to relocate to the community. In addition, JMU students assist with the labor shortage crisis by filling many local hiring needs at lower wages.

John Melvin University will generate thousands of dollars for local and state economy each year. “Aligned with our mission and values, we are very grateful to extend our blessings to our local community.”
